

Quick Guide: Calendar years covered by the Unclaimed Property Act

New Brunswick's Unclaimed Property Act came into force on January 1, 2022. As a result, companies and other entities carrying on business in New Brunswick need to review their books and records to see if they hold any monetary property that is now considered unclaimed property.

What is unclaimed property?

Unclaimed property is monetary property you are holding that you owe or that belongs to someone else – such as a customer, a vendor or a former employee.

In New Brunswick, property becomes unclaimed when you haven't been in contact with the owner for a specified period, commonly called the dormancy period. For most property types, the dormancy period is three years.

What do I need to know?

You will need to determine if you hold any unclaimed property at the end of the 2022 calendar year. That typically means you haven't had any communication with the individual property owner in the last three years.

Because the Act also applies to the preceding five years, you need to review your books for unclaimed property for the calendar years: 2021, 2020, 2019, 2018 and 2017.

Remember: For a property to be considered unclaimed, it needs to be dormant at least three years*. That means if you have identified possible unclaimed property on your books in 2017, you will need to look in your records as far back as 2014 to see when the owner last communicated with you.

Now that you have identified the unclaimed property, you must submit a report and deliver the unclaimed property during the program's first reporting period: January 1-March 31, 2023.
